

El Salvador

After Colombia we went to El Salvador. It is a super tiny country, but it is super cool and the people are very friendly and nice.

El Salvador is called the "land of volcanoes" because it has 20 or more volcanoes. Some are still active!!

Holding a bunny at the festival.

In El Salvador they have many different types of beautiful flowers. They grow everywhere. There are hibiscus, orchids and even a flower called the loroco flower which is a popular ingredient for pupusas.

The national food is called a pupusa which is a thick tortilla pancake. It can have different fillings such as cheese, beans or pork. It is a very popular meal and pupusa stalls are everywhere.

El Salvador also has some beautiful beaches with huge waves. It is one of the best places to surf in the world. A part of the country is even nicknamed "Surf City"!

Did you know that El Salvador has a lot of cool animals? In the jungle there are monkeys, parrots, tapirs and even jaguars and in the ocean there are sea turtles, dolphins, sharks (friendly sharks) and even octopuses.

Vulture

Tapir with a funny nose